

Dear Professor,

On behalf of the National Association for Business Economics (NABE), I would like to invite you and your students to join our organization. With nearly 2,500 members worldwide, NABE is the premier professional organization for business economists and those who use economics in the workplace. As part of our Fall Semester drive to encourage students to join NABE, we are pleased to offer a complimentary NABE membership to faculty members who recruit 10 or more students to join NABE.

Why do students join NABE?

Just $30 annually for students, a NABE membership is an excellent supplement to a student's academic training. NABE is a vehicle for students to connect with the top business economists in their field of study, stay updated on the latest economic and financial market debates, and apply their academic training to the challenges facing businesses and policymakers today. In addition, students can take advantage of NABE's vast career resources including its Profession Development Seminar, Skills Seminars and NABE's online career center, which includes career advice and job listings available only to members.

Why should you join NABE?

A NABE membership is your opportunity to add the leading economists operating in the arenas of business, government and policy to your professional network. All members receive, and are invited to publish in, Business Economics, NABE's quarterly journal. Finally, you will enjoy unlimited access to NABE's industry surveys and deeply-discounted registration to all of NABE's meetings which consistently feature top-notch speakers (The 2009 NABE Annual Meeting was headlined by Lawrence Summers, Tommy Thompson, Donald Kohn and David Wessel).

How to Join

You can join NABE online at www.nabe.com at the regular annual rate of $150, but why not take advantage of a complimentary membership by enlisting 10 or more of your students to join NABE? Simply have your students complete the included form and then fax the form to NABE at 202-463-6239. NABE will contact you with your registration information by email.

Thank you for your interest in the National Association for Business Economics!

Sincerely Yours,

Dear Student,

On behalf of the National Association for Business Economics (NABE), I would like to invite you to join our organization. With nearly 2,500 members worldwide, NABE is the premier professional organization for business economists and those who use economics in the workplace.

For just $30 per year for students (versus $150 for a regular membership), NABE will be an excellent supplement to your academic training.

In addition to deeply discounted registration fees for all of NABE's meetings, skills seminars and conferences, a NABE membership includes a free subscription to Business Economics, NABE's widely-read quarterly journal and access to all of NABE's economic and salary surveys. In addition, NABE's online career center, which allows users to post resumes and search exclusive job listings, is only available to NABE members.

Above all, NABE is a place to connect with the top business economists and experts in your field, stay updated on the latest economic and financial market debates, and apply your skills to the challenges facing businesses and policymakers today.

To join, simply complete the form included. Once the form is submitted by your professor, you will receive an email with instructions for activating your NABE membership online at the reduced student rate of $30.

Welcome to NABE!
